

Nominations close for town elections

With the deadline for filing nomination papers past, candidates in this year's election are already making serious bids for two wide open races.

Vying for two seats on the Wilmington Board of Selectmen are incumbent James Stewart, Roosevelt Road; Carl Backman, Lawrence Street; Anthony Accardi, Scaltrito Drive; and Michael McCoy, Lowell Street.

Contenders in the hotly-contested race for two three year seats on the Wilmington School Committee are incumbent Bridget Zukas, McDonald Road; Joanne Neale, Webber Street; Andrea Paglia, Bond Street; and former school committee member James Demos, Hopkins Street.

Running unopposed are incumbent Vaughn Surprenant,

Reed Street, for the five year seat on the redevelopment authority; incumbent William Strob, Mystic Avenue, for the five year seat on the housing authority; and incumbent Michael Cairra, Fletcher Lane, for the one year town moderator position.

The last day to withdraw from the election is Tuesday, March 24. The League of Women Voters will sponsor a Candidate's Night April 9 at 7:30 p.m. at Wilmington Memorial Library. The town election is April 18.

Dumpster fire

It wasn't your ordinary dumpster fire. Shortly after midnight, a trash compactor at Demoulas caught fire. Firefighters were unable to tackle the blaze for about three quarters of an hour, because the container was against the compacting device. A large wrecker (lights in background) had to be called in to move the container, allowing the firefighters to move in. (photo by Dave Fitzgerald)

Webber Amendment change: Pandora's box?

by Arlene Surprenant
The Wilmington Planning Board may have opened Pandora's Box with its proposed change in the Webber Amendment, a change which would affect contiguous property under one owner. The proposal is expected to be brought before voters as an article at April's annual town meeting.

As a result of publicity surrounding the changes in the Webber Amendment and site plan review, the building inspector has been flooded with "well over 150" applications for building permits, according to Planning Coordinator Sandra Murphy.

Several local developers attended Tuesday's board meeting seeking answers and expressing concerns over the sudden change.

"Some people are under the impression these are buildable lots; now two weeks later they're not...How do you handle situations like that?" asked developer Dick Stuart.

Builders argued that the proposed change, in many cases, will make smaller lots "useless" and hurt the out of town property owner who may not be informed about the town meeting article. Selectman Jim Stewart, who also chairs Wilmington's Affordable Housing Task Force, wondered how the state would view such a proposal.

"I just wonder if they will perceive this as a movement in the wrong direction (away from affordable housing)" since, he said, the state may feel this restricts building in town.

Jay Tighe questioned if there would be any kind of grace period if voters approved the revision, saying the article might create chaos and have "great ramifications."

Most of the board members, especially Michael McCoy, were outspoken that the amendment should be brought to town meeting so voters could decide its fate.

There has been some conjecture that the revision is a way to circumvent the subdivision law. Chairman Carole Hamilton told those present that, under the proposal, owners will still have a building lot but they won't be able to subdivide it. She added they decided to pursue this course of action when they learned a number of people would like to reverse the amendment.

During the discussion, there was much confusion over the specifics of the complicated amendment which was introduced by Stanley Webber in 1955. Reportedly, Webber felt the amendment was necessary to preserve ownership rights of people who owned lots that were only 5,000 square feet.

Planners seemed unclear about present minimum requirements under the law, saying they felt it was 100 feet of frontage on a 10,000 square foot lot. Between now and their public hearing on the article March 31, they agreed they will have to look closer at this amendment which is allegedly unique to Wilmington.

Correction

Certain remarks were incorrectly attributed to Building Inspector James Russo in an article on the planning board in last week's Town Crier.

Mr. Russo did not state nor suggest that the town had allowed 700 grandfathered lots to be built on. Instead, he questioned the planning board as to the effect of the proposed amendment, asking whether the board knew how many buildable lots are left which might have the benefit of the Webber Amendment.

The thrust of his remarks were that the proposed change was not supported by sufficient information and it was advisable to seek legal counsel prior to a change in the zoning bylaw.

Gas station holdup in North Wilmington

A gunman held up the D&D Texaco station on Wednesday afternoon, March 11, taking about $200 cash.

A white male pulled into the Texaco gas station in North Wilmington about 2:30 and parked near the bathrooms on the west side of the building. He walked into the office with the hood of his sweat shirt pulled down over his face and shoved a .357 Magnum at an employee. "Open the register" he ordered, "Put the money in the bag."

"Yes, sir," was the employee's response.

The suspect then said, "What's under the bottom of the till?" The employee lifted out the cash drawer to show nothing.

After taking about $200, the robber "cool as a cucumber" walked back to his car, a brown Mercury Lynx, and headed toward Route 93. An employee followed the car far enough to see it turn up Pleasant Street, only a quarter mile from the gas station.

After a brief search Wilmington Police found the suspect car on Pineridge Road. A neighbor had seen a white car, a sports model with a fin around the back parked in the same spot, but hadn't taken much notice. She did notice however, when the Mercury flew up the road and a subject got out and jumped into the white car.

Later reports identified the second car possibly as a '83 Mazda RX7. Both cars were reported stolen from the "Thank God It's Friday" (TGIF) restaurant in Danvers on Tuesday night.

The suspect involved at the gas station was described by witnesses as being a white male, age 19 or maybe a little older, medium build wearing a blue sweat shirt.

Warrant closed for special town meeting

The warrant for a special town meeting April 25 was opened and closed by the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday night. The meeting will be held immediately prior to the annual town meeting.

Articles on the warrant deal primarily with items in the FY 1987 budget and to transfer $10,000 from several accounts. According to Town Manager Buzz Stappczynski, $2,000 of that is for a "projected deficiency" in the secretarial account and $8,000 is slated for legal fees to question the town manager's authority and the town charter.

Another article asks voters to allow an exemption in three special cases in the moratorium on the sale of town owned land. The three year moratorium is in effect until next April and reportedly will allow for cataloging of parcels owned by the town.

Bridges open in April?

Both the Butters Row and Eames Street Bridges are slated to open temporarily in April. The former is currently undergoing repairs and will open April 1 and the latter will open the end of April.

Selectmen chairman Rocco DePasquale told his board Monday he hoped the state DPW would build a new bridge on Butters Row along with the Rt. 129 (Town Center) project. A conservative estimate sees a new Eames Street Bridge being built in five years.

Has anyone seen a little black book?

The tune "Get me to the church on time" has new meaning for a Wilmington man.

Don Heenan is a disc jockey, who plays at functions such as wedding receptions. He keeps track of his bookings in a black book.

Last week, he was discussing some business with a customer, and set his book on the roof of the van. And then he drove off, forgetting the book.

Don lives on Crescent Street in Wilmington. He found a manilla envelope nearby, but he did not find his black book. The black book was probably lost on Crescent Street, Broad Street or King Street.

Don said he has five weddings to go to in the next week, and he doesn't know where any of them are.

He is offering a $50 reward for the book. His phone number is 658-0251.

Selectmen will back breaking of moratorium on town land sales

by Arlene Surprenant
Wilmington residents will get a chance to approve or disapprove an exemption to a moratorium on the sale of town owned land for three "unique situations" at a special town meeting April 25. All three cases are being petitioned by selectmen and will come up as separate articles at the annual town meeting immediately following the special meeting.

Jim and Cindy Luciano want to purchase a 50 foot strip of town owned land abutting their property on Aldrich Road to allow them to either refinance their home or sell it at a later date. As it stands now, selectmen were told Monday night, the Luciano home is partially situated on that strip of land because the property was wrongly surveyed and has "no value at all."

Speaking for the DiPillos of Forest Street, Attorney Dan Brown said the family wishes to re-purchase the home they are presently renting from the town. Four years ago, the property had been foreclosed because of the family's inability to pay the taxes. Now, with a brighter financial outlook and health problems behind them, said Brown, Mrs. DiPillo and her three grown children are "legitimately motivated" to keep up the home and they stand a good chance of getting a mortgage.

Selectmen were cautious and worried that, should one or more children leave, the family might be placed in the same financial situation. They also feared setting a precedent since the family had lived on the property virtually rent-free since they couldn't afford the $400 a month rent.

Stapczynski recommended they support the article if back taxes and expenses amounting to almost $33,000 are paid and the monthly rent is paid until the passing of papers. He also said they should have a letter of commitment from the bank by April 25 saying the bank will indeed grant the family a mortgage. Robert Cain was in favor of attaching the property so the town would be reimbursed if the house were sold.

The third article asks voters to agree to a land swap in order to allow a new legion hall to be built off Old Main Street in South Wilmington.

With the destruction by fire of the old building, members of the American Legion offered to give the town their property at Middlesex and Adams Street in exchange for a few acres of town owned land in another part of town.

Selectman Bob Doucette asked if the value of both properties was comparable and if a swap could be allowed. Stapczynski answered that the town had the authority to exchange land.

It is expected that architectural drawings of the new building will be ready for town meeting.

Builder and abuttor

Conrad Lundgren and Dick Stuart were on the same side of the counter but on opposite sides of an issue at a hearing before the Wilmington Board of Appeals last month. Stuart was seeking official map approval for a subdivision which he and partner Joe Langone seek to build off Nichols Street. The Board of Appeals denied their petition on Tuesday night.

Petition denied on a very confusing case

Dick Stuart, Wilmington builder and developer, has 20 days in which to appeal an official map decision of the Wilmington Board of Appeals. That is, if he has figured out what the decision was and whether or not he wants to appeal that decision.

Tuesday night Chairman Bruce MacDonald gave the decision of the board, in a two word phrase. "Petition Denied."

The problem is that the case is just about as complicated as is any which has ever appeared before the Wilmington Board of Appeals. It started a year ago, and went through, it seems four sessions, with two or more changes in the appeals.

The case is called "Ohio Street," but the original road, laid out in the area involved was called "Railroad Avenue." That was on a plan made in 1907, for land between Lake Street and Nichols Street, on the easterly side of the Boston & Maine railroad. The entrance to the area is from Nichols Street.

But the real decisions were about two proposals. In what can be labeled the "first session" on February 10 Stuart was asking that there be 18 lots of land, in excess of 20,000 square feet.

That session was complicated by opposition from a neighbor, Conrad Lundgren. Mr. Lundgren lives a few hundred feet northerly in an area that can be said to be "in the woods." There is a roadway of sorts through the property owned by Stuart to the Lundgren home. That roadway has been there for years.

Because of the opposition by Mr.

Lundgren Chairman MacDonald put off a decision giving Lundgren a better opportunity to define his claims. That made the second date February 24.

The second session was re-advertised. Seemingly this was because of the delayed opinion and the claims of Mr. Lundgren. Possibly it was because Stuart had acquired more land.

Anyway, the second session found Stuart asking for 25 lots of land, each to be about 16,000 square feet in area. Of course the Webber amendment was mentioned in both hearings.

Lundgren had an attorney present for the second session. He was from Lynnfield and it is possible that he learned, for the first time that there was such a ruling as the "Webber Amendment."

The decision, for the hearing of February 25 was also postponed. It was set for March 10.

Lundgren was not present on March 10. Nor was his attorney. There were decisions but no arguments. And MacDonald issued the decision of the board-- "Petition Denied."

It is quite probable that what MacDonald was saying was that Stuart could not have 25 houselots of 16,000 square feet each, but could have 18 houselots of 20,000 square feet.

But that is something for Dick Stuart to figure out, and then, if he chooses, to challenge in the courts.

Light department called attractive option for Wilmington

by Arlene Surprenant
In a continuing effort to explore the impact of forming a Wilmington Municipal Light Department (WMLD), selectmen and fincom members learned Monday night that the establishment of such a department is one of the most "attractive" options open to the town.

W. Robert Patterson, a consultant with degrees from MIT and considerable experience in finance and the energy field, has been working with the town for the past 18 months to explore several options.

In a lengthy report, Patterson outlined a few cost factors in forming a town light department. According to Patterson, capital investment cost would range from $15 to $20 million, the purchase price of a distribution plant from Reading Light (RLD) could be between six and eight million dollars, and the estimated annual operations cost would come out to $1.5 million per year.

On the positive side, said Patterson, electric department revenues would be in the $16 to $17 million range and average electric power prices will be nearly one cent per kilowatt hour lower than current electric power prices.

Patterson also went over several benefits to the town were it to break away from Reading Light and form its own company.

He stated any payments in lieu of taxes as well as street lighting revenues will come back to Wilmington. Large industrial users, he said, will realize lower power costs and residential users will see lower increases in electric power rates. Presently, Wilmington has 12 large industries which consume one-third to one-half of all electricity from RMLD and no representation on that board.

Other benefits, Patterson added, would be flexibility in setting its own rates, no impact from the Seabrook nuclear project for residents, and an eight percent return on its investment in the electric plant which the town may be able to finance with a revenue bond at a lower rate.

Voters will have a chance to approve $125,000 at the annual town meeting to further explore the creation of a town light department. This is considered the second vital step in breaking away from RMLD.

Fincom member Walter Kaminski was concerned that it was too early to present these less than firm figures to voters. As an example, he cited the high school renovation project and additional expenses incurred at a later date. Selectman chairman Rocco DePasquale said the voters deserve to see some figures and he optimistically predicted it would be "money well spent."

Selectman Jim Stewart pressed Patterson to come up with a "worst case scenario" for voters outlining, for instance, costs if WMLD were required to pick up part of the Seabrook debt or if one or more of the 12 companies pulled out of Wilmington. He was adamant that taxpayers should know all the risks as well as the advantages of this proposal.

If town meeting votes in favor of spending $125,000 for further studies, there is a certain process which will be set in motion.

According to Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, once the vote is taken, Wilmington would have somewhere in the neighborhood of 90 days to begin negotiations with RMLD to set a price for the distribution plant. The case will then go to the Department of Public Utilities, where it could be stalled for a length of time. Once a decision is handed down, there is an appeal time period. The last step is a special town meeting to raise money for the plant.

Patterson estimated it would take two years from this April's vote to establish a municipal light department.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

Election previews tend to whet the appetite and provoke just a little bit of interest in the eyes of local voters, most of whom are probably still shedding tears after the primaries of last fall. In any event, here are a few races to keep an eye on as the remaining weeks of winter lead us into the beginning of spring.

First and foremost is the selectmen's race, with four candidates vying for two seats. That spells two winners and two non-winners (also called losers). The race here is highlighted by the vigor of the three new contenders. The one incumbent seeking re-election, Jim Stewart, is believed by many to have a sufficiently strong political base to withstand the challenges. However, according to the grape vine, also known as the 'Grapes of Wrath', watch for some prominent officials who will be noticeably absent this year in the public endorsements of Stewart, all of whom were with him in 1984. As for the three new challengers, Accardi, McCoy, and Backman, each is expected to run credible and vigorous campaigns, respectively. Michael McCoy and Carl Backman bring some impressive endorsements to the race, with McCoy being enthusiastically supported by State Representative Miceli, and Backman's campaign being managed by retiring Selectman Rocco DePasquale, who is also with his colleague Stewart. Backman will certainly be a candidate stressing special experience, as he has previously served as a Wilmington selectman, and chairman of that board.

As for Tony Accardi, his specific strengths in the race are going to be something for the other candidates to keep an eye on. First is his organizational skills in elections. His campaign for re-election to the school committee last year went smoothly and was well executed. Secondly, is his energy and passion for the door-to-door campaign. In local elections throughout New England, this has usually been the element of campaigning that gave a candidate the edge over his opponents. As for other door-to-door workers, you can expect to see Michael McCoy around the neighborhoods, who also seems very successful with visibility thus far.

On the academic front, the school committee race in 1987 is not what anyone expected it to be just a few months ago. There is an unexpected open seat for the term of two years, as well as two three-year terms available. The two year seat race is already being dominated by Michael Thomas of Concord Street. Thomas is off to a strong start, with a good deal of support in the community. Probably his greatest attribute is that he is not an educator. Many in town have expressed concern that the composition of the school board be kept balanced, in keeping with the American tradition of lay leadership of education. Thomas is a local chiropractor.

Also in the race for the two-year term is Gerry "Scratch" O'Reilly of Wildwood Street and James Babineau of McDonald Road.

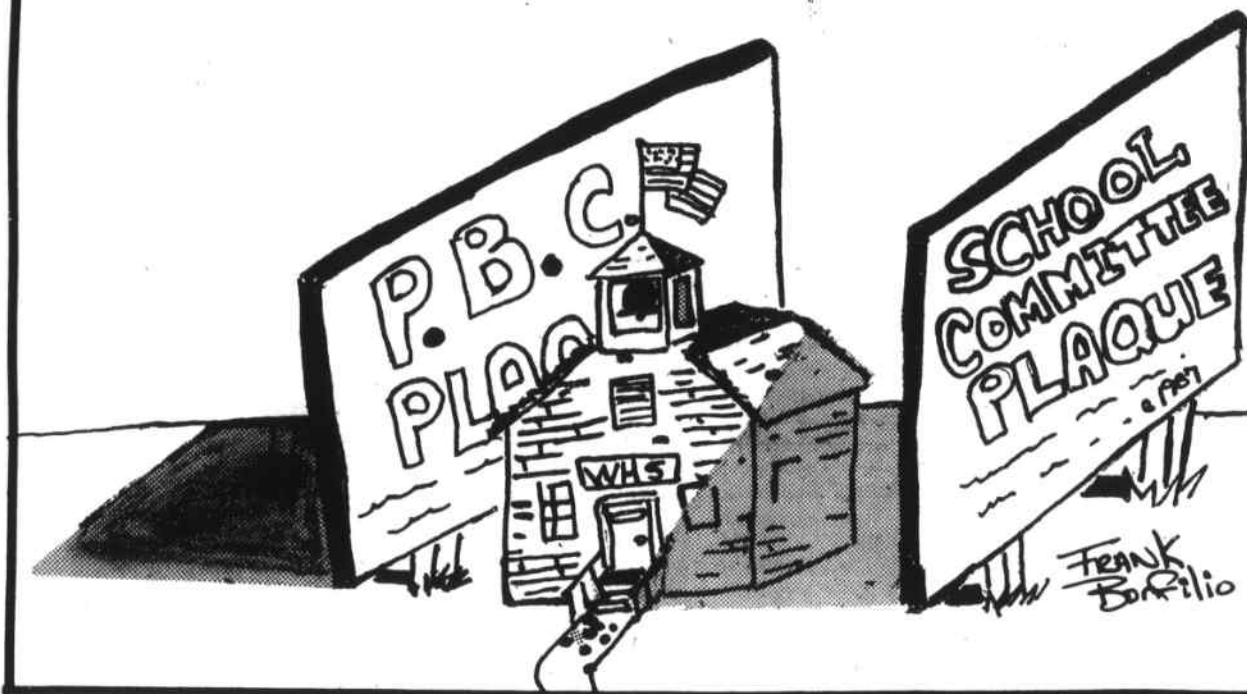

The three year seat race is without a doubt a definite contest between a long time incumbent, a past committee member, and two well-respected members of the Shawsheen School Parent Advisory Council.

The incumbent seeking re-election is Bridget Zukas of McDonald Road. She is a veteran school committee member known for grass roots campaigns, who faces some significant opposition from three candidates who will most probably pull in a good showing at the polls on April 18.

Two of the challengers are felt to have a strong chance at pulling in substantial support at the polls. Jim Demos is a former member of the board, and though he ran unsuccessfully for the Wilmington School Committee in 1984, his vote tally went well over the 1,000 mark. As for Joanne Neale, she seems to be well supported by the parents in the public school system, and is said to be expecting some impressive endorsements as election day draws near.

The third challenger is Andrea Paglia of Bond Street.

Plaque flak at Wilmington High

The Humble Farmer Boys and girls scored alike

Educators are upset because recent state-wide tests have revealed an academic performance gap between girls and boys.

Eddie Cator, who teaches over at the high school, admitted that he's in trouble. "Everyone knows that boys and girls are equally suited for all jobs nowadays," he said. "These test scores indicate we're not doing the job we're hired to do."

I tried to look interested as I said, "What did you expect?"

"It would have been so simple if they'd all come out exactly the same. But the test scores don't lie and we find the girls outstripping the boys in football and weightlifting."

"But I thought that's what your whole new system was aimed at," I exclaimed. "You've now proven that by cleverly altering role models, women can fit in anywhere in this man's complicated world."

"Under the law, they were only supposed to be equal. Unfortunately, it falls upon classroom teachers to maintain the balance. Girls also trounced boys in writing mechanics. That means they know more about punctuation and spelling."

I said, "Let's be honest. Boys don't really need to know anything about punctuation or spelling. My lawyer friend can't spell but he can think, and he says there's no shortage of smart girls wanting to do his secretarial work. They seem to love that kind of thing—at minimum wage, too."

Eddie Cator's mouth dropped. "Watch your tongue," he cried. "It's just that kind of thing we're trying to get away from."

"According to the test scores, you seem to have overdone it."

"A pendulum always swings the other way before it comes back," he said. "Actually, I think we're going about it the wrong way."

He looked over his shoulder to see if anyone was listening and lowered his voice, "Instead of seeing that the girls do better in science, I'd rather guarantee that the boys'll do worse. As long as the test scores are equal everyone would be happy."

"Equality is what it's all about," I agreed.

"There's another gap that no one has mentioned although it's printed right here in a graph on page one."

He thrust a newspaper at me as he jabbed at it with his finger. "Look at the scores as reported by towns."

"It's just what anyone would expect. Some towns seem to score high. Some score low. Some are in the middle."

"Notice which towns have the highest scores," he hissed.

"Why they're the richest communities in the state," I said with surprise. "Carolyn Chute, who wrote a famous book on poverty, had to come out of one of them just to be credible. Executives and retired people from away will pay anything to buy houses in those towns."

"Anyone who notices the graph will claim that scores are high there because they have better teachers—they pay them more."

Here Eddie Cator looked over his shoulder before continuing. "But I've heard it said that people have money because they're smart enough to get it. And if they're smart they stand a good chance of having smart kids. And smart kids—boys or girls—get high test scores."

"I don't believe in the IQ," I sniffed. "Everyone is equal."

"Well, in one area the kids were wonderfully equal," he cried. "Boys and girls got the same high scores in rich and poor communities alike."

"Don't tell me," I said. "They excelled in their knowledge of human biology."

Changes in the Webber Amendment?

The Wilmington Planning Board has been discussing the idea of having changes in Wilmington's unique Webber Amendment. Presumably it seeks to improve somehow that addendum to the Wilmington zoning bylaws.

The late Stanley Webber, who can be described as having been no one's fool, proposed that amendment in 1955. He had the ability of being able to look around him and to see what was good, and what could be improved, in Wilmington. His purpose was to protect those persons who had set aside houselots for growing sons or daughters, for their future use. Any houselot of 10,000 square feet, as of 1934, was to be so protected.

Many, but not all the available houselots in existence at that time have, been utilized. There may be a few in West Wilmington, and in other places. Many however are now useless as houselots because those lots are partly in wetlands.

The big problem today, in Wilmington is not the Webber Amendment. It is the problem of affordable housing, a problem imposed by the Commonwealth.

If, by using the Webber Amendment, the planning board or some other town body can provide answers to the affordable housing problem then it should be done. That is possible.

Otherwise this paper is inclined to say "let well enough alone."

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

An open letter to Mrs. Babineau. Politics is a funny game and any time you run for office (regardless of the office) you are playing the game of politics. When you play this game, decisions will go against you. You cannot go crying to the world because you lost.

You, not your husband, have cost him at least this vote. I had intended to vote for him, but if he won and any decision in committee had gone against him, we would have to listen to your crying. I don't believe I could stand that.

How come we don't hear the other candidates crying?

Miceli secures $3.8m for water treatment plant

An effort by Rep. James Miceli to win State funding for a new Wilmington drinking water treatment plant has ended successfully with a $3.8 million commitment by the Commonwealth for the new project.

Rep. Miceli was deeply involved in making sure towns such as Wilmington and Tewksbury would be eligible for funding when the original legislation was put on the books many years ago.

"This is a tremendous victory for the Town of Wilmington," Miceli said. "This state funding will enable Wilmington to build the type of drinking water facility which will serve the needs of the people of the community for many, many years to come."

The new E.H. Sargent Water Treatment Plant will be built at the south end of Sewell Road at the site of the existing Barrows Wellfield Pump Station.

State aid appropriated by the State Legislature and distributed by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering will total $3,806,319, some 50 percent of covered construction costs under the Commonwealth's Drinking Water Filtration Plant Grant Program.

The new facility, which will be capable of treating three million gallons of water per day, is expected to be completed by the fall

"Finding sources of safe drinking water is just one part of the problem our communities face today," Miceli said.

"The other problem involves the necessary treatment of that water to assure its purity and quality," he said. "The costs for such treatment facilities are enormous. Communities can't afford to pay these costs themselves. That's why state aid is crucial. And that's why this grant is so important to Wilmington."

Miceli noted that increasingly stringent state and federal water quality standards have caused more and more communities to seek state grants to build new and modern facilities.

"There's tremendous competition out there for the available dollars," Miceli said. "I'm very pleased that Wilmington will now get a share of those funds for this important project."

"It's been a privilege for me to work with this outstanding Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners over the years."

This Board chaired by George Allan, played an active role when the legislation was enacted in order to make these grants possible, and was one of the first Boards to lead the way relative to applying for construction reimbursement under the Act when the Butters Row Facility was constructed.

Chamber to change election methods

The Wilmington Chamber of Commerce plans to change its method of electing members to the Board of Directors. The purpose is to enable the chamber to have new persons on the board, from the firms and business of Wilmington.

At the present time there are 18 directors, six being elected each year for a three year term. From the board of directors the president and other officers are elected by the board.

The proposal is to elect four members each year, instead of six, and then two more members to be elected by the board of directors. Those two would be nominated by a nominating committee for the board.

Another proposal would limit any director to two three year terms, and then be ineligible for re-election until at least one year had passed. In this way, it is believed, there would be more change, over a period of time in the directorship.

A third proposal is to allow the board of directors to create divisions, bureaus, departments, councils, trustees or subsidiary corporations, as the Board of Directors sees fit, to better handle the work of the Chamber. The powers and duties of the various groups would be defined by the Board of Directors, who must also review and approve of their activities, proposed programs and collection and disbursement of funds.

The third proposal is to allow the creation of a Board of Trustees, whose duty will be to carry out special projects which have been identified by the Board of Directors. The Board of Trustees would be composed of retired directors and past presidents. This would enable the Chamber to retain the expertise of those persons after their term of office has expired.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce will vote upon the proposed changes at the eyeopener breakfast to be held at Stelio's Restaurant on Lowell Street on March 24, at 7:30 p.m.

Balog, two others promoted by Choate

Three key leadership appointments were announced recently by Paul L. Downey, president of Choate-Symmes Health Services. They are:

- Thomas W. Huebner of North Reading, appointed chief operating officer of Choate-Symmes Hospitals, Inc.

- Nicholas A. Balog of Billerica, named executive vice president of Choate-Symmes Community Services.

- Michele T. Visconti of Marblehead, promoted to director of the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

The changes occur following the recent resignation of Frank A. Niro, III who was named administrator of Glover Memorial Hospital of Needham. Niro joined Choate-Symmes in 1980.

Huebner moves into the position formerly occupied by Niro, while continuing to have responsibility for the Life Care/congregate housing program now under development.

Balog assumes Huebner's former duties, while also continuing his involvement in overall activities of the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

Visconti, former associate director of the Regional Health Center, becomes responsible for the major share of day-to-day operations there.

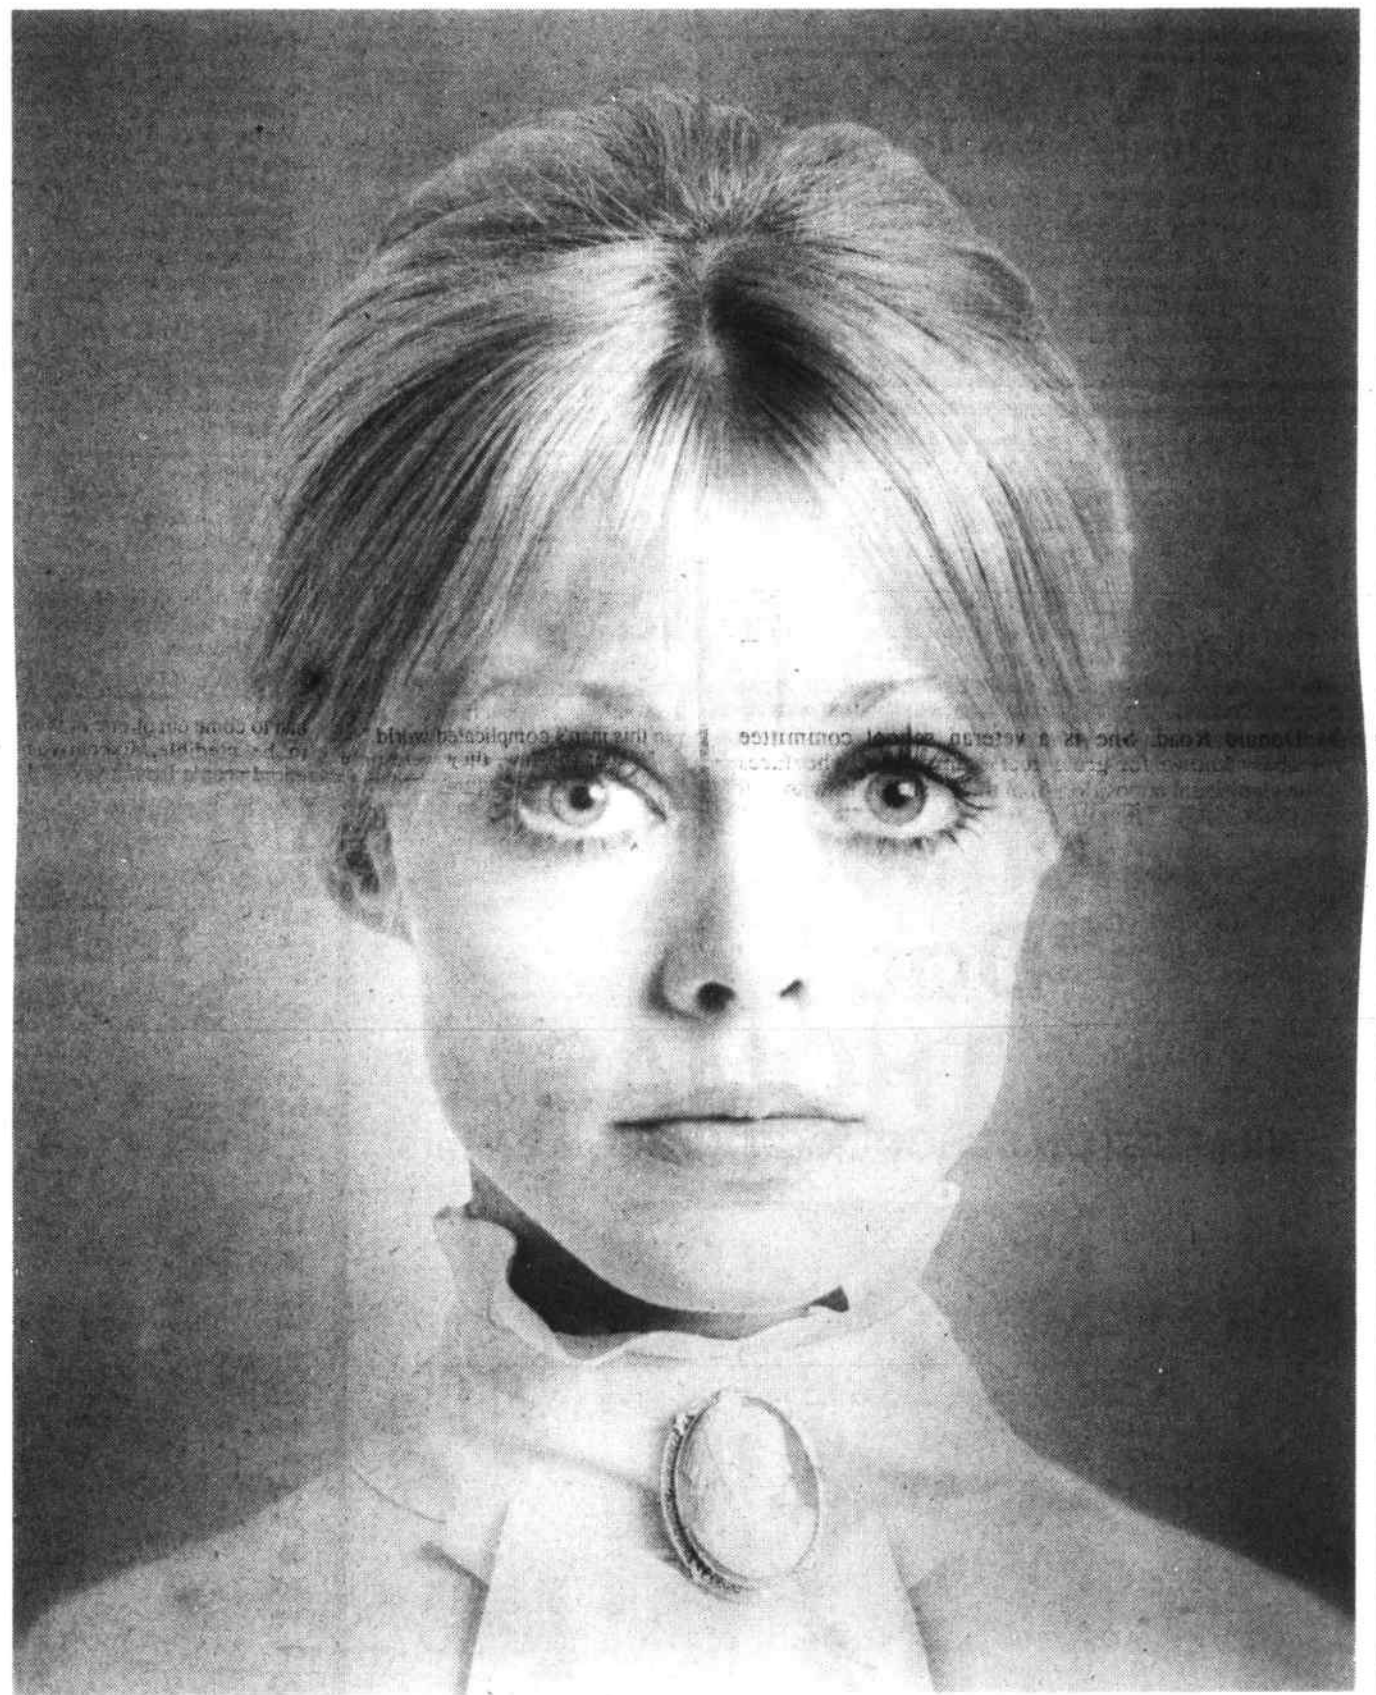

Visconti, formerly of Wilmington, joined Choate-Symmes in 1984, after serving as assistant director of The Recuperative Center, Boston, from 1982-84 and earning a Masters in Public Health at Yale University in 1982. Earning her undergraduate degree at Columbia University, during the 1970's she worked in the nursing department at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital.

Choate-Symmes Health Services grew from a 1981 consolidation of Choate Hospital (Woburn), the Regional Health Center in Wilmington and the Symmes Hospital (Arlington). It serves a 10-town area of the northwestern Boston suburbs, offering a full range of hospital, preventive and walk-in services. It is fully accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

Tewksbury Junior High ski program ends season

The Tewksbury Junior High Intramural ski program completed another successful season under the direction of junior high teachers Nancy Farrey and Donna Graham. Buses transported 70 students to Bradford Ski Hill in Haverhill on Monday evenings where students could choose to take lessons or purchase a lift ticket for recreational skiing. Rentals were also available at a reasonable cost.

This self supporting program is open to any seventh or eighth grade student attending Tewksbury Junior High School regardless of previous experience. Applications and information for next year's program, which will run in January and February, will be available in December of 1987 at the school. Students should listen for future details to join in on the fun.

Water commissioners hire engineer for aquifer zoning map

The Wilmington Water & Sewer Commissioners have contracted with Bart Paulding, an engineer, from Groton, to prepare an aquifer protection bylaw for the Town of Wilmington. Mr. Paulding, about four years ago, produced maps for the water commissioners showing the direction of water flow, underground, in Wilmington.

Commissioner Chairman George R. Allan, a vice president of an engineering firm, is at this time engaged in making a similar aquifer zoning bylaw for the Town of Westford. He cannot, of course, do such work for the Town of Wilmington, as he would be in a conflict of interest situation. But Allan and Paulding could "talk the same language" as they discussed the work to be done for Wilmington.

Allan wants the zoning maps to be about the same size as the present town maps, approximately 24 by 40 inches. The bonds for the aquifer zones must be by streets or property lines. Allan does not want the bounds to be indefinite, by wandering across fields, etc.

Allan emphasized there was a "worst case scenario," based on the pumping capacities of the water pumping stations, present and future.

Part of the discussion involved underground fuel tanks. Wilmington now has an anti-tank bylaw, voted several years ago, by which all underground fuel tanks must be removed at the end of 20 years of use. Commissioner Arthur Smith, a member of the committee which brought about the underground tank law, remarked that "We already have pulled about 100 tanks out of the ground, in Wilmington."

Junior Rotarians

Leigh Hastings and Ray Mercuri are the current Junior Rotarians at the Wilmington Rotary Club. The two Wilmington High School seniors have the honor of singing for their lunch on Wednesdays.

Arts council attends Arts & Humanities Day

Arts and Humanities Day II was held Wednesday, March 4, 1987 at the State House in Boston. Participating from Wilmington Council for the Arts were Chairman Dan Ballou, Evelyn Choate and Liz White.

After welcoming remarks from Barbara Garvey, chairman of the Massachusetts Arts Advocacy Committee, time was allotted for visits to Legislators to express appreciation for their support of the agencies distributing funds for artistic and cultural endeavors and to give opinions on pending legislation which would raise the amount of funding and which would develop a new fund for the purpose of providing loans or grants to non-profit organizations for the renovation or expansion of existing centers or the construction of new facilities.

Council members took advantage of the opportunity to sit in on a hearing concerning bills about the

Throughout the day, over 300 attendees were entertained by nine different musical and dance groups which ranged from opera to the Bay State Yokels, to a brass quartet, to Greek folk music and Black Dance ensemble.

After a buffet lunch, the afternoon was set aside for distinguished speakers. Remarks were heard from Governor Michael S. Dukakis, Mrs. Kitty Dukakis, Senate President William Bulger, House Speaker George Keavarian, Dr. Nicholas Zervas, chairman, Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities; and Sandy Frazee, chairman of the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council.

"The theme for the Appreciation Day, 'Culture is our Common Wealth,' was very appropriate for this interesting and informative program.

Tewksbury School News

The Individualized Guided Education (IGE) program has a long history in the Tewksbury Public Schools. The program was instituted in Tewksbury in 1972 at St. William's School (a rented facility) as a special program for fifth and sixth grade students in the Heathbrook School with Individualized Math System (IMS) for the teaching of mathematics. Several of the eight teachers who volunteered to originate this program are still with the program. The next year brought individualized language arts to the program.

In 1977, the Foster School became the new home for IGE and during this time the process for selection of students was by lottery of parents who chose the program option for their child.

In 1981, the program moved to the Center School with the same structure as enrollments in the school department continued to decline.

With enrollments further declining, space became available at the Junior High in 1983 and IGE successfully moved there then. In its years at the Junior High School, it has grown and developed even with continued decline in enrollments in the grades involved.

At the present time, parents of fourth grade students have received material and a selection sheet should they wish to enroll their children in their alternative program for fifth and sixth graders. There will also be an orientation program on Thursday, March 26, 1987 to familiarize parents with the program and to answer any questions or concerns on the part of parents. The deadline for selection by Parents is April 3, 1987.

Orientation Night, Thursday, March 26 starting at 7:00 and continuing until 9:00 at the Tewksbury Junior High School for all interested parents.

REALTY WORLD

Achievement of Excellence

REALTY WORLD Forest-Conant has achieved national recognition for placing in the top 10 percentile of more than 8,500 real estate firms across the country. This honor, awarded by National Statistical research Company of Chicago, is based on a computer analysis of hundreds of thousands of questionnaires sent to recent home buyers asking for an evaluation of the service they received from the real estate firm who handled their transaction.

REALTY WORLD Forest-Conant scored well above the national average. The customers were asked to evaluate the service provided and the overwhelming majority of REALTY WORLD Forest-Conant's customers responded that the service was good or excellent.

This is the second year in a row that REALTY WORLD Forest-Conant has received this industry honor.

The National Statistical research Company was founded in 1968 to assist the real estate industry in offering better service to their customers.

Altron recipient of Vendor Achievement award

Altron Incorporated, 1 Jewell Drive, Wilmington, announced recently that it has been named recipient of a Vendor Achievement Award by Masscomp, the Westford based manufacturer of scientific workstations and data acquisition computer equipment. The award, given to Altron's Interconnect Products Division, was presented to Al Berry, vice president of marketing for Altron, by Dick Phillips, vice president of manufacturing for Masscomp.

The Toward Excellence At Masscomp (T.E.A.M.) Award was given to Altron on the basis of outstanding product quality, delivery performance, technological leadership, cost controls and overall service.

Both companies are part of Massachusetts' high tech success story. Altron was founded in 1970, and has grown to over $27 million in sales, with employment of over 400. This year, Altron will add over 100 people as part of its growth plans. Altron is a leading supplier of printed circuit boards and backplanes to high technology industries. Altron was one of Masscomp's first suppliers when that company began operations in 1981.

Masscomp's 1986 sales were $51 million.

Al Berry, Altron's vice president of marketing, said that the presentation of this award "illustrates that a commitment to quality is a two way street between suppliers and their customers, and that the success of Masscomp and Altron shows how a long term relationship based on this kind of commitment can benefit both companies." Mr. Berry also noted that this is the latest of several such quality and performance achievement awards recently received by the division.

Also representing Altron at the presentation were Art Astbury, vice president of operations, and Bob McCarthy, regional sales manager. Also attending from Masscomp were Dave Doughty, director of purchasing and Bob Consiglio, manager of mechanical purchasing.

It's YOUR Money

"KIDDIE TAX"

The new tax law wiped out most -- if not all -- ways to shelter income by moving it into your children's names. It may still make sense to gift them with assets, but the benefits have been cut.

All investment income over $1,000 earned by a child under age 14 will now be taxed at the parent's rate, except for funds in trust before March 1 of last year. This applies to capital gains on stock sold as well as dividend and interest income.

In another major change, dependent children claimed as exemptions by their parents will no longer be able to claim themselves as exemptions on their returns.

Transferring assets up to $10,000 a year from each parent to the children still escapes gift tax. What can you do to ease the tax bite? Invest in tax-free municipal bonds or tax-deferred United States savings bonds or insurance. Family businesses might hire youngsters; earned income is taxed at the child's rate.

Selectmen eye rules for large facilities

As licensing authority, the Wilmington Board of Selectmen plans to enact some rules and regulations governing large public facilities like the Aleppo Temple Shrine and the Ristuccia Exposition Center.

The request to look into the matter came from Bruce MacDonald, chairman of the board of appeals. MacDonald's board is currently looking into the possibility of granting a special permit for accessory uses for the new exposition center (ice rink).

According to Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski Monday night, there aren't too many neighboring towns with large facilities which can be used as a guide.

During their brief discussion, selectmen agreed they'd have to look at such limitations as parking, security, and limiting the number of tickets to the number of seats in the building. The parking issue, it was pointed out, is going to be one of the hardest to deal with and may require an amendment to town bylaws.

Stapczynski said he would begin working a first draft of possible regulations.

Engineering becomes part of public works

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski announced Monday that the town's engineering department will now fall under Wilmington's Department of Public Works. He hopes to have the move complete by April's town meeting so he can tell voters the engineering budget will now fall under the DPW budget.

Stapczynski also said he is drafting a job description of the town engineer position and the job will be advertised in April.

Wilmington could conceivably have a new town engineer by May of June, he added.

The Engineering Department has been operating without a full complement of employees for several months, since the retirement of Robert Higgins.

The town manager has engaged the firm of Faye, Spofford and Thorndike to carry out some of the work usually done by the department.

Wilmington senior topics

Open enrollment

Open enrollment applications have arrived at the Senior Center from Blue Cross. A senior may, during the open enrollment time, which is between March 1 and April 30, enroll in one of the Medex policies, or may update their present Medex coverage.

It is important for us to carry a supplement insurance policy to the Medicare Insurance which pays for 80 percent of medical bills. With the price of medical care increasing rapidly that remaining 20 percent which is our responsibility is becoming more difficult to pay. Any of the Medex policies can be a tremendous help to us. With the application you will receive a breakdown of the policies and the cost of each.

Art classes

Our second session of the art and painting classes will begin at the Senior Center Tuesday, March 17. The class will be held for two hours from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. The cost is $1.00 per hour. In the last session the beginners felt Mark did not spend enough time teaching them to draw. They wanted him to spend time teaching them from the very beginning until they had mastered the technique of sketching. The seniors who had experience with art and painting wanted him to help them with their paintings.

So, to be fair to all, we will split the class. Beginners will be taught in one room and the painters i.e. oil paints and oil crayons will be working on paintings with Mark's assistance in another.

At the end of this session of classes we will put the paintings on display in the Center. The best painting will receive an award. We know many of our seniors are talented painters, but we also know we still have a lot to learn if we are to perfect our talent. We will need at least three more students to make the class self supporting.

Crafts for sale

Besides being a talented artist, we have many other seniors who are talented in many other crafts. We have installed four display closets in the craft room for seniors to sell their crafts in order to supplement their income. We will be placing an ad in the newspaper to let the public know the seniors have craft articles for sale in the Senior Center. So take your articles and fill up the display closets.

Spring ahead walk

Starting March 11, the "Spring Ahead Walk for your Health Program," will begin under the state trained walking director Ed Curtis. The program, to be an effective health asset is held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday

Sing-a-long-dance

Another way to feel good and get rid of the stress in our lives, is to join the large group of seniors at the Wednesday dancing and sing-alongs. Sing and dance to the delightful sound of pianist Gil Smith, Barbara Zaino and Dot Phillips. The happy time starts at 1 p.m. Refreshments are served.

April social

The Council on Aging therapeutic social for April will be the Nunsense play at the Boston Shakespeare Theatre. It will be held Thursday, April 30. We have ordered only 100 tickets to this very funny play which has won four 1986 critics awards, so sign up early.

We have to notify the theatre at least three weeks ahead if we will need all these tickets or if we will need more. Where we will stop to eat before we arrive at the theatre will be in the next week's column. A $4. deposit will be requested when signing up on Thursday, March 12.

Council on Aging

We will have two openings on the Council on Aging Board this year. If you would like to serve the seniors by speaking for them on the Council on Aging, give your name to Edie in the office. We hope to fill these appointments by the first of April.

'Scapino' lures mystery riders

by Arlene Surprenant

Though it was the recreation department's first ever Mystery Ride, Wilmington, it seemed, wasn't quite ready for the comedic talents of the Carousel Theater Company last Thursday night.

At precisely 6 p.m., 27 residents journeyed to an unknown destination for an anticipated evening of fun and fellowship. Most of us came up with educated and other guesses as to where we would eventually end up, ranging from the infamous Golden Banana to Boston's Mystery Mansion. Virginia Pryor came closest to guessing the mileage to our destination and won a pair of cinema tickets while we sipped sparkling grape juice and tonic and kept up a steady hum of conversation.

The bus came to a halt in front of Giordano's Starlite Dinner Theater in Georgetown. This was it. We were assailed by hunger pangs, heat from the bus, and ready for anything - almost. What we weren't quite prepared for was the rustic, cavernous atmosphere inside Giordano's.

There was an unfinished, empty look to the building with chairs piled in one corner, stark black and white walls, and a sea of empty tables before us. There were also black curtains and a valance over a stage set as a cafe with bright touches of reds, greens, and yellows for relief.

For the most part, the buffet dinner wasn't bad. Slabs of turkey and roast beef, salad, herbed rice, corn, potatoes, and stuffing were piled high on our plates. Some of our tablemates complained of lukewarm coffee and flat, sticky sweet tonic. We were told the tonic was dispensed from large kegs but we could have juice or good Georgetown water instead. This writer stuck with the water, which was one of the best parts of the meal. When it came time for dessert, out table unanimously opted for WARM apple crisp. It came back cold. Someone forgot to turn on the oven, we were told. Surprisingly, dessert was delicious, hot or cold.

Throughout dinner, conversation at our table moved easily from the upcoming Wilmington elections to power plants, colleges, and past recreation trips. As a few more diners straggled in and our anticipation heightened, we were treated to some dubious mood setting, operatic melodies in the background.

Finally it was time for that forgettable, low budget production aptly entitled SCAPINO. We should have been forewarned when the first five minutes passed without a single word of English touching the actor's lips.

"Are we going to be able to understand this or what?" called out one of the more outspoken members of our party. That was the least of the problems with this little known Italian farce.

The two-act comedy featured the acting talents of the youthful Carousel Theater Company. The actors tried-hard-to involve their audience and generate interest in the energetic antics on stage.

The loosely woven, often obscure plot centered around a roguish servant named Scapino and his schemes to bilk money from two wealthy families. Occasionally, a few lines generated laughter. When Ottavio says, "I'm not made like other men," for instance, Scapino feigns horror with an exaggerated

"Oh my God!"

The best character, by far, was Carlo, whose rubber faced expressions and exaggerated clowning added a new dimension to theatrical production. Paul Gallant as Sylvestro was also amusing, especially in purple wig, leather togs and chains as he aided and abetted Scapino in his trickery.

The play had a little bit of everything - appealing costumes, romance, murder, deception, and humor. But it failed to hold the interest of its audience. After a few minutes we were ready to leave.

As we boarded the bus once again for our return journey, Susan Delaney of the recreation department generously thanked her predecessor, "I think we should give Joan Goulet a big hand. She came up with it (the idea for the trip)."

Joan gasped "oh God" as she sank lower in her seat at the back of the bus. Her husband Paul couldn't resist a few tongue in cheek comments of his own. These prompted more laughter than the whole play put together. "I'm not going to sleep tonight; I'm too excited," he said, adding "I just can't wait to see Jesus Christ Superstar (Giordano's next offering)" and "Does anyone want a leftover program?"

Except for Sarah Creeth winning the prize drawing, the trip home was uneventful. In looking back, most of us agreed with Kay Scanlon that the evening was "different" and gave us a chance to get out for a while. And who knows by the time June and the next tentatively scheduled mystery ride rolls around, we'll probably be the first ones to sign up. Probably.

Raging river

One of the rafts belonging to Wilderness Plus, a Tewksbury-based guide service, navigates the rapids behind the Lowell Hilton during a trial run down the Concord River last Saturday. Wilderness Plus will be holding guided whitewater rafting trips down the Concord for the next few weeks, while the heavy spring runoff keeps the river in a fit of swollen rage.

Garden club

The Tewksbury Garden Club monthly meeting was held Wednesday, Feb. 11, at the home of Linda Vassil.

The guest speaker for the evening was Michael DiGiorgio of A&M Landscaping, Tewksbury. DiGiorgio's program consisted of many helpful hints in landscape design and care of plants.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the Garden Club, please contact President Yvonne Hall, 851-6668.

Museum of American
Textile History

The Textile Conservation Center (TCC) of the Museum of American Textile History has been awarded a grant by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities; to continue and augment a program of services to historical organizations in Massachusetts.

In April, the TCC will offer three workshops designed to help small institutions preserve their collections effectively and inexpensively. "General Care of Textiles" will teach participants to identify sources of damage to textiles, to recognize the symptoms of damage and to select methods of slowing deterioration.

"Volunteer Training" is for organizations that have had a site survey and are dependent upon volunteers to implement their collections management programs. Pairs of volunteers will spend a day at the TCC, working with the staff on fabric and fiber identification, condition reporting and basic handling treatments.

The third workshop will be conducted jointly by the TCC and Curator of Textiles, Diane Fagan Affleck. "Textile Storage" will address both the cataloguing of a textile and the arrangement of economical storage. For more information about the TCC's collection managements programs, call Kim O'Leary, 686-0191.

March office hours for Rep. Beckwith

State Representative Geoffrey C. Beckwith, who represents Reading, North Reading and Wilmington's precinct 3 in the Massachusetts House, this week announced his schedule for March office hours.

"A state representative must be accessible to everyone in his or her district," said Beckwith, who holds regular office hours each month in order to make it easier for constituents to meet with him whenever they have a question or problem concerning state government.

Beckwith will hold March office hours at two locations:

- On Thursday evening, March 26, he will be at the Flint Memorial Library on Bow Street in North Reading from 5:30 to 7 p.m.; and
- On Thursday evening, March 26, he will be in the Conference Room of the Reading Public Library on Middlesex Avenue from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

"Interested citizens should never hesitate to get in touch with me at any time," said Beckwith, who invited residents to call him at either his State House office (722-2430) or at home (944-5030). "But these office hours will provide everyone with an additional opportunity to see me personally and offer input, ask for information or request assistance with a problem regarding state government."

Prayer To The Holy Spirit

Oh Holy Spirit, thou who are all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who giveth me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done unto me and who in every instant of my life art with me. I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and reaffirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things abound.

My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. (Person should pray 3 consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be.)

Publish this prayer, once grace attained.
Grateful for Grace attained.

Megan set for U.S. competition

As part of their effort to qualify for one of eight berths in the women's Olympic field hockey competition in Seoul in 1988, the U.S. National Field Hockey team will travel to Edinburgh, Scotland to compete in a six nations tournament from April 5-11. The tournament will be played in a round robin format and will include the national teams from Holland (1984 Olympic Gold medalists), Great Britain, Ireland, South Korea, Spain and the USA. All matches will be held at the Meadowbrook Stadium.

Former Wilmington High School and University of Massachusetts star Megan Donnelly will be a key member of the United States team.

A top three finish in the Great Britain Tournament by the USA Team is important as the competition is one of two remaining Olympic qualifying events for the USA.

Two of the six participating teams have automatically qualified for the Olympics. Holland will compete as the defending Olympic champion and South Korea as the Olympic host country. The remaining qualifying tournament will be the Pan American Games which will be held in Indianapolis, Indiana in August.

The USA Team last met Ireland and Spain in the World Cup in August of 1986, defeating Ireland by a score of 2-0 and Spain in the crossovers, 4-0. The USA finished ninth overall, while Spain finished 11th and Ireland 12th.

In October of 1986, Great Britain and South Korea competed in the USA Field Hockey Classic in Trenton, New Jersey where the USA defeated Great Britain, 1-0, and South Korea defeated the USA, 3-1. Korea took the Classic title, while Great Britain finished second and the USA defeated Argentina to place third.

The USA Team will prepare for the Great Britain tournament by meeting England in Wembley Stadium on Saturday, March 21 at 3:00 p.m.

The USA Team last played England in Wembley Stadium before a crowd of 67,000 in March of 1978. The match ended in a 2-2 tie. From London, the team will go to Amsterdam to compete against top level Dutch club teams and will play two matches against the Dutch National Team on March 24 and 26 before traveling to Edinburgh on April 2.

The members of the U.S. National Field Hockey Team are: Beth Beglin (captain), Watertown, Mass., West Chester University; Diane Bracalente, Quakertown, Pa., Old Dominion University; Sandi Costigan, Saugus, Mass., U. of New Hampshire; Hightower, Virginia Beach, Va., Old Dominion University; Louise Hines, Westport, Conn., Univ. of North Carolina; Sheryl Johnson (v-captain), Cupertino, Calif., U. California/Berkeley; Mary Koboldt, St. Louis, Mo., University of Iowa; Donna Lee, Randolph, Mass., University of Iowa.

Michael McCoy running for board of selectmen my positions to the Selectmen's Board. It is this support that has encouraged me to make this challenge and to ask for both the support and votes of friends and neighbors.

As a graduate of Wilmington's public schools, the University of Lowell, and holder of a Masters of Art Degree from Anna Maria College, I believe I am educationally qualified for the post I seek.

But education means nothing if it is not linked to a commitment of one's community. As a member of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, Sons of Italy, YMCA, and as a local merchant, I have stayed committed to my community. It is this commitment I wish to expand through my role as Town Selectman.

Over the course of the next decade issues such as infrastructure repair, safe water and sewer services, expansion of youth and elder services and of course, the issue of development will touch all our lives.

As the next six weeks before election unfold I hope to have the opportunity to speak to many of you individually about your concerns and my goals. Together we can ensure a quality of life for ourselves and our children which will benefit all those who care about our community. That is my goal as Selectman and my pledge to you as I begin my candidacy. I hope you will give me the opportunity to serve you. I can think of no greater honor.

Strob seeks re-election to housing authority

My name is William (Bill) Strob Sr. a present member of the Wilmington Housing Authority and holding the position of vice chairman.

I am a candidate for re-election to the housing authority board. I would like to express my thanks to all who had faith in me at the 1982 town election by placing me on the housing authority board.

All the present members of the housing board have worked very hard so we could provide housing for the elderly and low-moderate families. The housing authority board give our thanks to all other board members of the town who assisted us in gaining our goals. And to all the townspeople who voted to turn over to the housing authority town owned land so we could reach our goals.

The Housing Authority have already signed the contract for the construction of the eight (8) low-moderate family homes.

The contract for the 32 units of elderly housing to be constructed at Deming Way is all set to go out on bid. We also accomplished funding for sewerage at Deming Way and modernization of the present units. All the construction and modernization of all the projects the board was informed will begin this month of March or April.

That is why I am a candidate for re-election and be a part of the present board to help and seek more housing for the low-moderate family and elderly.

In closing, again I want to thank one and all for making my dreams come true.

Candidate for Re-Election

Moderator Michael Caira is candidate for re-election

Michael A. Caira of 5 Fletcher Lane has announced his candidacy for re-election as Wilmington Town Moderator. Caira was first elected Moderator in 1982 and is currently completing his fifth term in that office.

Mr. Caira is a graduate of Wilmington High School, class of 1967, and he holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Boston College and a Masters in Public Administration from Northeastern University. He is presently National Executive Director of the Order Sons of Italy in America, maintaining offices both locally and in Washington, D.C. In that capacity, he serves as chief operating officer for the largest Italian American organization in the country.

Mr. Caira has long been active in public service. In 1972, he was elected to the Wilmington Board of Selectmen. He served as the town's representative to the MBTA Advisory Board and the Middlesex County Advisory Board and he was a member of the Board of Directors of SHARE, a greater Lowell drug and rehabilitation program. He did not seek re-election to the Board of Selectmen, but did serve in an interim capacity as an appointed member of the Board from the fall of 1981 through to his election as Moderator in April of 1982.

Mr. Caira was formerly employed with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts serving in several management positions. He had been the Director of Finance and Administration for the State's Division of Capital Planning and Operations and the Business Administrator of the Metropolitan State Hospital in Waltham. From 1971-1975, he served as an Executive Assistant to then Governor Francis W. Sargent.

Mr. Caira holds membership in the Wilmington Sons of Italy, the Wilmington Knights of Columbus and the Winchester Hospital Corporation. He is a member of the College Baseball Umpires Association and the Mass. Baseball Umpires Association. He is also a volunteer coach in the Wilmington Recreation Basketball League.

Mr. Caira was just named as a 1987 recipient of the "I Migliori" in "Mens et Gesta" (the best thoughts and action) Award, which is the highest award presented by the Lyceum Institute of Italian American Studies. The award is presented to Americans of Italian ancestry for outstanding contributions in various areas of discipline.

Michael Caira, a resident of Wilmington since 1958, and his wife, Jane, have three school age children, Jennifer, Angela and Michael, Jr. Caira welcomes questions on his candidacy and urges voters to attend the Annual Town Meeting.

James Demos seeks return to school committee sional organizations dealing with education and children services.

Some of the areas that I shall address if I am elected to the Wilmington School Committee are as follows:

For the past decade we have heard from many directions about the problems in our schools. We have had an abundance of research, a plentiful supply of analysis and an impressive accumulation of reports. Public concern is rising. Technological change and global competition make it imperative for us to equip our children in our public schools with skills that go beyond the basics. For productive participation in the working world of today and tomorrow, in a society that depends ever more on technology, our children will need more than "minimum competency" in reading, writing, mathematics, science, reasoning capabilities, use of computers, etc.

Other issues that affect our children such as:

Confidence, self respect, respect for themselves and others, motivation, etc.

School dropouts - this phenomenon begins in grade one not at the high school level.

Suicidal tendencies - these come about because of a cumulation of pressures that usually peak in children in their pre-adolescent and adolescent ages (grades 7-12).

Discipline - this is a learned behavior from birth through adulthood and in school from kindergarten through high school. It is not a symptom that is learned in the high school; it peaks at the high school level.

Organizational skills - these must be taught at the elementary levels of children's educational experience not at the secondary level of education.

With my formal educational training, my 28 years work experience and my participation in many professional organizations dealing with children and school law, I feel that I can be a catalyst for change in order to help the children and their parents in the Wilmington Schools by being a well informed spokesman on the Wilmington School Committee.

I have also served as an active member on a number of profes-

What's it like being at a middle school?

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

"I would change my hair" responded the majority of students at middle schools in the Southwest to the open-ended question "What would you change the most about middle school?" Seventy to 80 percent of those same students prefer having lots of friends to being the smartest, and approximately 85 percent of those kids would rather be with friends than watch television. Close observation of Reading's middle school students makes it clear that this survey could just as easily have taken place in the Northeast.

Conclusions drawn at the recent conference of the National Association of Secondary School Principals indicate that in an effective middle school, students and curriculum are of equal value. The teachers who see these sixth, seventh, and eighth graders for almost seven hours every weekday have much wisdom to offer people, especially parents, who also have to deal with them. Coolidge and Parker teachers and staff are experts on the early adolescent:

"I'd be a millionaire if I owned a hairspray concession ... there's a wooden board in the lav' just below the mirrors that the kids think is there just for them to write on... Middle school should provide a climate in which mutual respect and trust are evident. Firm and fair guidelines for discipline should indicate that adults care about young people. Educating for life in a democratic society involves clearly defined behavior limits and demands responsible explanation of those limits. The best middle school is one in which administration, staff, parents, and kids work together." ... Lou Adreani, Assistant Principal, Coolidge Middle School, Reading.

"For the early adolescent there is one critical issue that helps to shape every day at school, 'What will the other kids think?' 'What they wear, say, do (or not) is unfailingly held up against their own version of peer opinions. As far as behavior is concerned, this benchmark can lead to some unusual choices. Fortunately, kids have the ability to recognize that every game has to have rules. This fact, coupled with enforcement that is both caring and fair, keeps us on an even keel - almost! But it does not inhibit some creative wriggling while on the hook. For example, 'I didn't think the firecracker was loaded... But my friend did the same thing last week and you didn't catch him ... I wasn't smoking, I was holding it for some kid ... My mother forgot to tell me I was home sick today ... I didn't mean to punch him in the stomach twice.' ... Bill Cowles, Assistant Principal, Parker Middle School, Reading.

"The physical changes alone between sixth and eighth grade are unbelievable. In the sixth grade, the girls sit on one side of the table and the boys on the other and I feel like I'm at a dinner party. By the eighth grade, I have to separate them from their beloveds ... In the sixth grade the kids all want their pictures taken, no matter what they're wearing. The eighth graders disappear into the lav' until I have to retrieve them ... Sixth graders are very eager to share information about everything. Seventh graders are in the middle, very likable, adjustable and cooperative - like a middle child and a middle school. The eighth graders are very independent, unique, individual, and working with them on the yearbook is a pleasure. They're already people with whom I can talk in an adult way, and we can make decisions together." ... Mimi Finnon, Library/Media Specialist, Parker Middle School.

"Adolescence is like an early midlife crisis - with physical changes, emotional growth, continuous questioning, and re-establishing values. Both stages in life involve new goals, many changes, and a need for excitement and activity. Teachers have to be able to roll with the emotions of the kids, not to fight those emotions. Curriculum can be related to songs and dances meaningful to the kids... If parents and teachers can understand they're going through the same changes as the children, they can relate much better and get along together. If you know anyone going through a midlife crisis, you realize that if you put up with them for a while, later on they'll be just fine... Middle school is the time of a Cabbage Patch Kid in one arm and a boyfriend on the other. I love middle school kids - they're so much fun because they're so complicated."

...Mary Fuller, Social Studies, Coolidge Middle School.

"I lead a schizophrenic life - I teach sixth grade and I have an eighth grade homeroom ... There are two forces at work in middle school. One is the issue of fairness. Do unto Susan as you do unto Michael, etc. Kids are upset if they perceive (or mis-perceive) that someone else seems to be getting a break! On the other hand, this is an age when 'puberty-stricken' kids are most in need of individual understanding. So, to get through to middle schoolers, teachers must 'treat everyone the same' while dealing with each individual as a unique and special person." ... Gloria Rosenthal, English, Coolidge Middle School.

"What's so good, bad, and impossible about middle schoolers? The flip-flops. The same child can show surprisingly responsible and mature behavior one moment, and then childlike actions the next. One friend's 12-year-old son initiated a serious discussion about a New York Times editorial with me and then, 10 minutes later, tromped off to bed with a teddy bear! As a parent, it's hard to know which mode your child has switched into: child or adult."

...Dr. Genie Ware, Clinical Psychologist, Coolidge/Parker Middle Schools.

"As the years go by, I have locked into a certain philosophy and the whole puzzle has come together. We want to create the right atmosphere for the kids, a place to which they can't wait to come in the morning. We want

Roving

I need to get something off my chest: the other morning I woke up, looked in the bathroom mirror and realized two things. One, I'm beginning to get those little puffy bulges under my eyes, the ones that creep up your face during the middle of the night and then gradually fade away as noontime approaches. Two, I'm beginning to suffer from blurry vision first thing in the morning. The only conclusion which I can come to, God forbid, is that I'm finally getting older.

There isn't much I can do about those little bulges under my eyes first thing in the morning. They're apparently going to be around for the rest of my life, so I'm told by a few older buddies of mine. They tell me that eventually I'm going to end up with quite a few tiny lines under my eyes, lines that won't go away once the sun is directly overhead. That's O.K., though. I can deal with that. I've often heard that men look pretty good with a few "crow's feet," I think they're called.

The vision problem bothered me, though. I've always worn glasses, it seems, but only for reading. My eyes have been bothering me enough lately that I reached the decision to see an eye doctor again. I guess the situation that glued this decision to my brain was an incident which occurred about a week ago. I was with a best friend at a

Lynnfield 'A Heritage Preserved'

By JIM ROUILLARD

Part III

LYNNFIELD — Little things, like liberty, can mean a lot — including sometimes the freedom to choose your own hog reeves.

As regards the American Revolution, Lynnfield produced at least one damned but bullet-proof Yankee whose quality of mercy was not strained.

And it is not only on the Declaration of Independence, signed in Philadelphia in 1776, that an authentic John Hancock may be found "writ large" to proclaim the severance of one political entity from another.

Closer to home, the embers of desire for self-government smoldered at least as early as 1713, when the area now called Lynnfield was set off as a separate precinct of Lynn.

Its boundaries were defined by a committee which included two Royal "leftenants," one mister, one captain — and one Stearns, whose only rank or title, apparently, was his first name, Shoball.

Yet this creation of "Lynnfield in the bud," so called by late town historian Thomas Wellman, served only to whet the local appetite for full independence.

The separation gave residents of "Lynn End" a small portion of self-control, but still left them under the jurisdiction of Lynn, according to resident Alan Foulds. "Within the next decade," he wrote in 1982, "a move was initiated to incorporate the region as a separate town, but the population was so small it was not yet practical."

A second try came in a petition of 1778.

The cause involved neither tea nor taxes — but the usual complaint of distance from the seat of government, and the fact that the road from the North Precinct to the center of Lynn was excessively long and poor for travel, resulting, in the locals' view, in "unequal representation."

The result? The 1778 petition was denied — but Lynn Town Meeting voted money to repair the road.

Three years later, the voters of Lynn End tried once again, according to Foulds, "to be set off and incorporated separately. The new petition ... was addressed to the state legislature," and delivered in March of 1782.

After three months' debate, the "Act for Erecting the District of Lynnfield" was signed into law by Gov. John Hancock on July 3, 1782.

Lynnfield was now a fully separate entity — despite its designation as "district," which has led to confusion via the town seal and among later historians. The town was empowered to elect, among others, its own selectmen, tithing man, constable, clerk and hog reeves.

But a few earlier Lynnfield incidents deserve mention here, involving the slaughter of the "Flower of Essex," witchcraft, and two variations on the theme of faith.

From the Annals of 1675, related by Wellman:

"This was the year of the Bloody Brook disaster ... at South Deerfield ... which was, it was said, the saddest day that ever befell New England. The historian Palfrey says: 'The company (consisted) of ninety picked men ... and but seven or eight at the utmost, escaped the savages who were believed to be not fewer than 700 ... One of the Englishmen was stripped and left for dead, after being first wounded by a musket and then by a tomahawk, and yet he escaped. Another forced his way through with his musket, disco in Boston. The place was packed with gorgeous young women. We were standing approximately fifty feet from the dance floor. I happened to spot what I thought was a terrific-looking lady, and I pointed her out to my friend.

"What in heaven's name are you talking about?" was his response. So he doesn't have the same taste in good-looking women, I thought.

"I'm talking about her," I said, pointing again in the direction of the dance floor. There was only a small group of people moving to the beat of the music at the time, so I didn't think my friend was going to have a hard time figuring out which young lady about whom I was talking.

"If you're talking about the one with the dark hair and the blue top, you'd better either see a shrink or think about getting glasses."

I glanced out over the dance floor once more, squinting this time. "Yeah, that's the one."

"That one," my friend indicated to me, "is wearing a beard."

I felt positively ridiculous. I did, for a moment, consider a psychiatrist, but then opted for an eye doctor. I called Opticians 3, at the Woburn Mall, and made an appointment, which I got for the following day. In the meantime, I gave some consideration to the kind of eyeglasses I wanted to purchase. Just because I'm getting older doesn't mean I can't buy a pair that still looks good.

I went out and bought a bunch of men's fashion magazines, and flipped through them, paying particular attention to the male models who wore glasses. I was surprised to find that a lot of male models wear them. I guess it's kind of chic to be wearing glasses these days. I finally spotted this handsome fellow who wore a pair of red-framed eyeglasses. They were sort of the shape of Clark Kent's eyeglasses. Maybe a tad heavier, say, more along the lines of the ones Buddy Holly used to wear. I've been told that style is very hot now.

So off I went to my eye doctor's appointment, prepared to get a pair of those red-framed Buddy Holly eyeglasses. The young woman who managed Opticians 3 informed me that red frames are very big in New York City right now, but I'd probably catch a few strange glances wearing them around Boston. I didn't care. In fact, I've always enjoyed walking to the beat of a different drummer. Let them call me weird.

Well, my friends and co-workers haven't exactly called me weird. But I've sure as heck stopped them in their tracks since I purchased those red-framed eyeglasses. I've heard myself described in every manner imaginable. I've been told I look like a doctor. I've been told I look like a college professor. A writer, which is O.K. I don't mind that one. But then I heard a female friend of mine say I resemble a defrocked priest! That one I found hard to swallow.

Until, that is, the absolute clincher of a description was tossed my way. A couple of young women I know stopped me the other morning, and one of them said, "You know, I've been looking at you in those red-framed glasses for a couple of days now, and I can't decide whether you look like Ryan O'Neal or Ali MacGraw."

I walked away totally demoralized. I love you, too, sweetheart, was my final thought on that encounter.

The decision to buy new eyeglasses was just the beginning of my recent concern about getting older. I've had an overwhelming urge lately to stay in excellent physical condition, which I am doing by working out religiously and trying to eat all the right foods. Every time I go to the grocery store nowadays I find myself searching the aisles for foods that'll enhance my energy level and, frankly, assure me of a little more potency. I don't think I need to explain this. However, I am always bothered by the fact that the only people who are shopping for the same foods I am are people who appear to be over fifty-five. And the women I want to meet shop for foods in sections of the grocery store that are overrun with those under twenty-five.

The other night, upon my return from a depressing experience at the grocery store, I opened my mail box to discover what I hoped was a cruel joke. Someone had sent me a subscription to Modern Maturity! I nearly dropped my bag of food right there. I was fuming. For crying out loud, I'm only in my thirties! I didn't think you received Modern Maturity until you were at least fifty-five. Maybe one of those old people in the instant milk section thought it would be a nice gesture to give me a subscription for lent. Upon further investigation, it was revealed that the subscription was in my father's name. Lucky for me. I was about to make a call to the Samaritans.

A traumatic experience like that one makes you think. How soon will it be before I really start to pay attention to those Dick Van Dyke — Ed McMahon television commercials, the ones that advertise ten thousand dollars worth of life insurance for $6.95 a month, regardless of how old you are and without a medical exam? How soon will it be before I break down and call that toll-free number to get information about those Craftmatic beds, the ones that look just dandy for folks over fifty, particularly folks who have a hard time getting in and out of bed, never mind sleeping in it? I'm actually having second thoughts about ordering one, just so I can get the free camera, which will come in handy when I retire and decide it's time to visit the Redwood forests in California. Older people need to think about cutting expenses, and that free camera will save me quite a few bucks by the time I'm fifty-five or so.

And then there was the incident at the "Y" the other night. I stopped by for a quick game of racquetball, and one of the teenagers who was working out there accidentally bumped into me and said, "Excuse me, sir." Excuse me, sir! Not "Hey, buddy, watch it!" Not "Why don't you look out where you're going, pal!" But "Excuse me, SIR!" It was the sir part that bothered me. I'm all for young people showing respect for their elders. But I don't want to be called "sir" when I'm out having a friendly game of racquetball. I want to be known as "buddy" or "pal." Get it, KID?

I guess I can't blame the kid, though. I do look a tad more mature lately. No, let me rephrase that. I've discovered, since buying my new glasses, that there's a lot more grey hair on my temples than I'd noticed before. I've always had grey in my mustache, and I've long since grown accustomed to the patch of grey on my chest. You really notice those two areas of grey during the summer, when the sun makes my skin bright red. I'm wondering how much all that grey on my head is going to stick out this summer, now that I have to look at it through my new red-framed eyeglasses? God, how long before some smart-fanned kid on the beach calls me Phil Donahue? I swear I'll break his neck, if he does.

The fact that I'm getting a little older really hit home the other night when I went to stand in line at the movies. As I approached the line, another young couple was approaching at the same time. Normally, I will back off and say, "No, you go ahead first." Both young people hesitated just as I hesitated, and the young man said, "No, you go first." Finally, I did, but I was convinced that he made the gesture because he considered me his elder. It bothered me so much that, just as I reached the front of the line,

I moved all the way to the back so that two elderly couples mid-way down the line could purchase their tickets before I purchased mine. Talk about paranoia!

While I stood in line at the movie theatre, I thought about how young everybody who goes to the movies looks. Well, just about everybody. Those two elderly couples made me feel a little more comfortable about being there. But I wondered whether the theatres were being overrun by kids because everybody over twenty-five owns a VCR. Those people rent movies and stay home.

One thing truly re-enforces my recent concern over getting older: I have very little tolerance these days for little kids. I don't care where they are — in my yard, at the mall, at a sporting event — they tend to get on my nerves very quickly. Which tells me I'm either getting old, or I'm not meant to be a father. I'd like to think it's the former, as much as it pains me to admit it.

Kids are always the topic of discussion among females at high school class reunions. The men like to talk about their jobs, their cars, their boats, or sports. But women enjoy talking about their kids. And their homes. Probably because those subject matters make it easier to explain away their own grey hairs and wrinkles. The men, of course, don't have to worry about that. They have their macho subjects to keep them from facing the fact that they, too, are getting older. I can't wait for my next class reunion at Wilmington High School. My twentieth is coming up next year. It'll be fun to see who has gotten grey and who still looks great. And for some, the grey will mean looking great.

In the meantime, I'm going to succumb further to my early mid-life crisis by buying a new car.

Probably a sports car, since buying a big car, say, a Cadillac, would be just further evidence that I am indeed getting older. Nosirree, it's going to be something hot for me. If nothing else, I'll get a certain amount of perverse pleasure out of overhearing people say, "He thinks he's still eighteen." I'll settle for twenty-nine.

Middle Schools

them to think of us as their second family and of school as their second home." ...Al Lahood, Principal, Coolidge Middle School.

"Early adolescence produces dramatic differences between youngsters - so why do they all look the same? Because of the very basic need to belong to a peer group and avoid exclusion, and the desperate need to be with friends. As dependency ties with parents loosen, passionate longings for substitute dependency relationships appear. Youngsters use trial and error methods to try to be 'somebody.' As they look toward their peer group for validation of their new roles, they remain very vulnerable to the reactions of others. Perhaps what is most striking to me is how powerless they feel, especially when it comes to their lives in school. They are extremely self-conscious, constantly threatened by their perceived differences. They defend against self-doubt by trying to look as much like the others as possible ... I worry the most about the students who don't know how to relate and are afraid to try. We can't change the way other kids feel about them. We can help all early adolescents to feel good about themselves. Give them a chance to learn from their mistakes and praise them with honesty." ...Diane Ketlak, Guidance/Psychology, Parker Middle School.

"My favorite part of middle school is moving from class to class. My least favorite is a double period of English." ...Melanie Nissen, Grade Six, Parker Middle School.

"Sixth graders come to the middle schools a little fearful, rather innocent, anxious to please the teacher - they are fun to teach. Seventh graders evolve with confidence, moving and growing away a bit more and finally becoming eighth graders, rather sophisticated, top of the ladder, 13 going on 35. Eighth grade is still fun to teach - but a bit harder to reach!" ...Mary Cann, Library/Media Specialist, Coolidge Middle School.

"A good middle school is staffed by people who like, as well as understand, the age level. A good middle school accepts and responds to the unique needs of early adolescence. This alone forces middle schools to be very different from schools at other levels. Where else can you find such wildly different people straining so hard to look the same?" ...Jack Delaney, Principal, Parker Middle School.

"Early adolescents seem to have great difficulty in understanding themselves, let alone being understood by others. Perhaps we can get through to them best by listening more, lecturing less, and reaching out with love as often as possible." ...John T. McHugh, Social Studies, Parker Middle School.

PHIL COULTER, director of the Pops Orchestra of Ireland (shown above) will appear at the Stoneham High School on March 16.

Irish Pops gala in Stoneham

Believe it or not by Ripley! Just by the luck of the Irish, Phil Coulter's Pops Orchestra of Ireland will appear in concert at the Stoneham High School, 149 Franklin St., Stoneham, on March 16, bringing in St. Patrick's Day with their popular musical fanfare!

The concert will be at 8:15 with free parking. The Stoneham High School is just a half mile from Stoneham Square. The concert is under the auspices of the Greater Stoneham Community Concert Association.

To celebrate this gala evening, and to honor this international ensemble, members and guests are strongly urged to wear something green.

During the past concert season, Phil Coulter and his orchestra have played to full concert halls throughout Ireland, every show a sell-out, and each concert receiving a standing ovation by their enthusiastic audiences.

The director of the orchestra, Phil Coulter, is a pianist and arranger, songwriter, and record producer of 'pop' music. In 1984 and 1985, he assembled the orchestra, arranged the score, and played the piano for an album called, "Classic Tranquility," and a follow-up called, "Sea of Tranquility," selling successfully in Great Britain and Ireland.

His songs, "Puppet on a String," "Congratulations," and "Saturday Night," on records have sold millions of copies. One of his proudest moments came when his song, "My Boy" was recorded by Elvis Presley, and became a massive hit throughout the world. He has written scores for a number of American movies including "Water Babies," now a children's classic.

Admittance to the concerts sponsored by Community Concerts is by membership card. The inexpensive memberships admit the bearer to four local concerts of the season, and many others arranged by other community concert associations in Greater Boston and the New England area.

For further information, and to obtain membership cards, please call local representatives Mrs. John Cronin at 944-2913, or Mrs. Robert Leavitt, membership chairman at 944-5262.

Applications have been distributed to civil engineering and building construction technology departments at Massachusetts colleges and universities offering construction oriented degrees. Additional application forms are available from the MCAP office, 888 Worcester Street, Wellesley, Mass. 02181. Completed applications must be returned by MCAP by April 1, 1987. Award recipients will be selected by contractor representatives of the Associated General Contractors of Massachusetts' Education Committee, and will be announced by the end of May.

Mr. James (Jimmy) Duff, of Winchester, is the owner of Duff Spring Company. I'm sure you've seen his ads in newspapers, telephone books and in the huge sign in front of his shop on Mystic Avenue, Medford. Jimmy also advertises in the 'spring in his walk,' and the sincerity of his talk, that he is in complete command in regards to knowing the suspension system of your car or truck.

His beautiful daughter Susan, a graduate of Mass. State at Amherst majoring in finance, told me that her father is an avid golfer. I asked him if he ever got a "hole in one." "As a matter of fact," he said, "I missed getting a hole in one yesterday by five strokes."

John Ed Fogelberg referred to Woodchips, (in his column in the Burlington Edition of the Woburn Times), as a column of groans and chuckles. I hope that the chuckles are in the majority. Thanks John! Folks, if you didn't begin this day with a smile, it's not too late to practice for tomorrow.

Boys and girls who play in various sports, remember that a team has to learn how to 'lose' before it can win gracefully. Play to win, give it your very best, then if you lose don't fret, it will make you a better winner next time.

Fast, faster, fastest! Speed, speed and more speed, that seems to be the rule today. Some of us should 'stop' and consider the life in the 'slow lane' of the Amish people to acquire undisturbed tranquility and peace. Fast foods, fast cars and fast living begets 'fast disintegration.' Slow down, enjoy life and the scenery as we step back to the peaceful days of yesterday in the middle of the hectic world of today.

My cousin Dennis Tully is always talking. Maureen, his mother, said to him at dinnertime, "Dennis, will you shut up, keep your mouth closed and eat!" "How in the world can he do that?" I asked my redhead 'spitfire' cousin. She turned to me and snapped, "You shut up!" "Why," I asked, "I'm not eating." Folks, believe in 'flying saucers,' one just flew by my head.

Tommy Cook and his mother were looking at a family album. In one photo a handsome young man with dark wavy hair was in the picture. "Who is that?" Tommy asked. "That's your father." "Oh yeah," replied the skeptical young man, "then who is that bald-headed guy smoking a pipe in the living room?"

Did you ever hear of Joe Elastic and his Rubber Band? They played the kind of music that would make you 'spring' up, 'stretch' your legs and dance. One night during intermission, some wiseguy shoved a napkin down inside a trombone. When the poor chap came back he gave the instrument one supreme blast and blew his toupee off the top of his head. It sailed through the air, across the dance floor, and it nearly caused a panic when some women thought a 'bat' was flying over their heads.

Handsome young Johnny McCurtin of Wilmington ran home to tell his parents, John and Jane, that he was the best boy in his class. "Did Sister Victor tell you that?" "She didn't have to, I found that out myself." Thatta boy Johnny.

St. Patrick's Day is next week and I'll be 'on guard.' After a St. Paddy's Day party last year I went out and was aghast to see that someone had painted my car a 'Kelly Green.' I rushed back in the hall and shouted, "Awright, who's the wiseguy who painted my car green?" Six foot three Larry Ahern came over and, towering over me, shouted, "I did, and what are you going to do about it?" "Oh, nothing I guess Larry," I said meekly. "I just thought I'd come back in and tell you that the first coat is dry!"

A huge cement truck collided with a police van in Woburn that was carrying a load of prisoners. Officer Kevin Fisher sent out this radio message, "Attention all cars, be on the lookout for 10 hardened criminals."

Sir Winston Churchill had a speech impediment as a child. He grew up however to become a great orator and a fluent member of Parliament. A woman who hated his 'guts' said to him one day, "Sir Winston, were you my husband, I'd poison your tea." Churchill, always a gentleman, smiled and said, "Madam, were you my wife, I'd 'drink' it!"

My wife Kathy missed her usual afternoon nap yesterday.

she 'slept' right through it. I came home from work and she said, "I cooked you a fish dinner and the cat ate it." "Don't worry about it," I told her, "I can always get you another cat."

Spring is just around the corner and this farmer wants to be ready for spring planting. He placed this ad in the Farm Journal, "Wanted by farmer 42, woman about 30, who drives a tractor. Please enclose picture of the tractor."

I asked Dennis Tully, "How do you get 'down' off an elephant?" "You don't get down off of an elephant, you get down off of a duck!"

Happy birthday Bruce Morang of the Reading Chronicle.

Eddie Sargent of Wilmington is 86 years young and a staunch reader of Woodchips, since my first column. Ed is a retired superintendent of the Wilmington Water Department. I am happy to learn that a new, $6.3 million water treatment plant will be named for my friend Edmund H. Sargent. "Congratulations Eddie."

Happy St. Patrick's Day

Winchester native calls the tunes

By CRAIG HARRIS

Radio is an extremely difficult field to break into, but Winchester-born Peter Lydotes has been making great strides. After hosting folk and acoustic music show, "The Coffeehouse" over Emerson College station WERS-FM, Lydotes has accepted a job with popular soft-rock station, WMJX-FM.

Peter Lydotes

While Lydotes' official position on WMJX-FM is as a news producer - "I put together traffic reports," he explains during a recent interview, "and all the things that come over on the wire service," - he's already had the opportunity to fill in as DJ on several shows. "I'm the new man on the street," he says, "so I have to fill in on holidays like Christmas and New Year's Eve. It's a whole different ballgame than what I've done in the past. It's got to be tight and professional. You've got to follow the clock. You don't have the freedom to blather. The music is tightly structured. You get spoiled at the college radio level."

Lydotes' earliest musical memories came at the bequest of his older brother Drew. "There was always music in the background," he recalls. "I really loved the British rock of the sixties. Things like The Beatles, The Stones, Cream and Eric Clapton. I loved The Beatles' harmonies. They did so much with simplicity."

Teaching himself to play guitar, Lydotes spent his teenage years playing with a series of rock bands. "I was the one that played at the dances in junior high and high school," he says.

For a while, he performed with his brother in an acoustic duo, but, he found playing music to be frustrating. "I was very turned off by having to make a living playing music," he explains. "It became too much of a job."

His experiences, however, helped him when he enrolled at Emerson College and auditioned for a slot on the college's radio station. "(Doing a radio show) is the same as performing," he says. "I try to introduce the whole feeling of dynamics to putting a show together. Singing helped me to learn mic technique, although, it's weird sitting in a room without a live audience."

Programming his show, Lydotes blended songs into a solid, cohesive ambience. "It mostly just happens," he reflects. "You've got to go with a certain degree of spontaneity. But it has to flow. It has to be interesting. Rhythm and instrumentation are very important. Going from an up-tempo bluegrass tune to a haunting ballad can be very effective."

During the two years that he did the coffeehouse, Lydotes was constantly receiving telephone calls from listeners. Most were requests for songs, others offered or sought information regarding music that was played. "(The phone lines) exploded," he claims. "There were so many calls that I was only able to answer a quarter of them."

Doing the 6 to 11 a.m. airshift had its drawbacks. "I had to get up at 4:30," Lydotes says, "and be in the studio by 5:30. I'm not a morning person, but it's great getting up so early. Everything's so quiet."

Lydotes believes that a responsibility comes with doing a radio show. "You influence people," he says, "by what you say and by what you play. If you're too negative, you can turn somebody off. A depressing song can really bum someone out."

A highlight of Lydotes' "Coffeehouse" show was the inclusion of live-in-the-studio interviews with musicians who were promoting a Boston area performance or a new recording. "I tried to make them feel comfortable," he explains. "I tried to get them to relax so that they'd sound as natural as possible."

Although a lengthy list of performers were interviewed, Lydotes remembers the mornings spent with folk-pop performer Liv Taylor, "new acoustic music" and bluegrass guitarist Tony Rice and early-twentieth century jazz revivalist Leon Redbone as his most memorable. "Tony Rice was really tough," he recalls. "He had nothing to say about his playing technique. He never practices, he doesn't listen to his old records. I found out, however, that he liked to fish. (Redbone) never lets up his disguise. You can't pinpoint who he is. The door (to the studio) - opened and he strolled in with a serious, deadpan look. He just sat there - with his hat, shades and overcoat - and smiled. On the other hand, you don't have to interview Livingston. You just raise the levels on the mic and let him go."

In the two years that he hosted the show, Lydotes saw a change in acoustic music. "It's gotten very popular," he reflects. "There's a lot of great new talent. I'm lucky that I got into it when I did."

After he graduates, Lydotes intends to continue his career as a radio announcer. "I'd like to still be on the air," he says. "I'd love to be able to apply my interests in acoustic music on a commercial level."

GRAPHIC DESIGN

Concerned about the costs of graphic design for a simple ad, business card or paste up brochure for your Home Based Business? Here is a chance to learn some simple tricks and how to work with tools to produce good results for a very modest investment.

Sponsored by Middlesex County Cooperative Extension, a workshop will be held on Saturday, March 28 at 10 a.m. at the Cooperative Extension Schoolhouse, 105 Everett St., Concord. There is a $2.00 charge and checks are to be made payable to the University of Massachusetts.

Anyone interested in attending this meeting must register by contacting Mary Williams, Home Economist, Middlesex County Cooperative Extension, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Ma. 01742, telephone 369-4845 or 862-2380.

WALLPRINTING BUSINESS

A new company in Burlington, Continental Design Wallprinting, is putting entrepreneurs in their own business of wallprinting. Wallprinting achieves the same results as wallpaper at less than one-half the cost using what looks like a hand-held printing press filled with one to three colors of latex paint.

While an experienced paper hanger can do maybe three 18' X 8' walls a day, trained wallprinters can do 12 to 15 walls a day.

The wallprinted design which can be applied to even textured and grasscloth walls is washable, durable and dries in 15 minutes. Unlike wallpaper, however, the process is safe for hotels and hospitals and there is no danger from burning vinyl wallcoverings and there are no seams or bubbles. After your initial purchase of training and equipment all you pay for is the

ON YOUR FEET HEEL PAIN

Heel pain is a common problem that affects both men and women and is usually associated with prolonged standing or walking on hard surfaces.

The most common diagnosis for the origin of heel pain is that of a heel spur, which is visible on X-Ray, is not often the source of the pain. More often, it is the ligament that attaches to the spur that is the source of the pain.

Prolonged standing or walking on hard surfaces such as wood or cement will cause the muscles of the leg that support the foot to become tired. When that happens, the arch of the foot "falls" and the big ligament on the bottom of the foot becomes strained. The strained ligament can either become irritated in the middle, causing arch pain or it can pull little bits of bone skin off the heel bone causing pain and inflammation. Over time, the small bits of bone skin pulled away, form a spur.

Treatment includes, dealing with the inflammation and the use of arch supports. Rarely is surgery required.

TOUCHSCREEN SYSTEMS

MicroTouch Systems, Woburn, a leading manufacturer of touch screen systems, recently reached an agreement with Intech Systems, a subsidiary of Detector Electronics Corporation in Minneapolis. Under the agreement, MicroTouch will supply touch screen systems, service and support to the Intech customer base.

Detector Electronics, a publicly held company primarily engaged in the industrial fire and burner management business, became the sole supplier of touch screens to Control Data for use with its Plato training system, one of the first to use a touch screen interface. In 1984, Detector shipped over 10,000 touch screens for this application. At the end of 1986, Detector Electronics elected to divest itself of its Intech operations in order to focus on its core fire control business.

MicroTouch, founded in 1982, is currently the leading manufacturer of capacitive touch screens. Headquartered in Woburn, Massachusetts, MicroTouch manufactures and markets a broad range of touch-sensitive kits, monitors, and software development tools for OEM's and systems integrators.

BENEFITS MANDATE

Four out of five small businesses in Massachusetts already provide health insurance to their employees and oppose any legislative efforts to mandate additional benefits, according to a survey of the state's largest small-business organization.

The results of the survey, conducted among the 8,900 members of the National Federation of Independent Business/Massachusetts and released recently, found that 82 percent of the small-business owners offered health insurance to their employees. In addition, 60 percent of the small firms paid the full policy premiums, while 37 percent shared the cost with employees.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 11, 1987-PAGE 5-9

Of those businesses not providing health insurance, 40 percent cited the high cost of the insurance, while 47 percent said they did not have enough employees to qualify for a group health plan.

Legislative proposals which would require businesses to grant leave to employees following the birth or adoption of a child were opposed by 74 percent of the responding members.

The survey found that 55 percent of the responding members currently had some form of a parental leave policy — 22 percent for mothers only and 33 percent negotiated leave for any employee.

Lynnfield's heritage

Society had joined the off-shoot congregation.

Research into local history can easily become an addiction. Though too much of Lynnfield's history has been left out, space is short, and the chronicles are there for the interested to pursue the town's history further — to learn of the wolf pits, any traces of the powder house on Powder Hill, and the old gold mine.

But last week's section promised black marble and magnesium bombs, which, mentioned briefly, will bring us nearly to the present — where legend and romance usually fade away anyway.

Wellman presents an extract from a letter dated from Lynnfield in 1836: "I wish to inform you of the great excitement there is in this place about a very valuable mine called 'black marble,' found in Samuel and Jesse Skinner's hills..."

"Dr. Charles Jackson, a very high authority, said also: 'It is a kind of marble highly prized in Europe, being extensively used for mosaic work, inlaying tables and other rich furniture. There is nothing else of the kind, no stone, so beautiful in Massachusetts.'"

"A manufactory was built, but it was soon found very expensive to work the material, and the work was abandoned."

It was for Marcia Wilson Wiswall's "Lynnfield, A Heritage Preserved," to bring us up to date on the Serpentine Mine, "Once located on Forest Hill off Underhill Road. When the mining of serpentine or 'black marble' became too costly, the mine was abandoned but during World War I the magnesium sulfate was used to produce magnesium bombs. Later rust resistant paint and then Epsom Salts were manufactured here."

So, usually, romance and legend pass and evolve into the commonplace of today, some of which will evolve into legend for tomorrow.

Yet, even today, courtesy, chivalry, and hospitality are by no means vanished — but thriving — in Lynnfield, if the perseverance and patience of one resident is any gauge.

Arthur Foulds, president of the Lynnfield Historical Society in fact, recently displayed all the above virtues. After reading part one of this series, he tried to telephone the writer 30 times, to prevent an incorrect reporting of Lynnfield's incorporation date — then gave up on Ma Bell and cheerfully traveled to Stoneham to supply the essential facts — as well as a significant portion of the research material and photos used in this final installment.

And so thanks.

described as one of Boston's finest listening rooms. The concert, sponsored by the Boston Bluegrass Union, opens with Bay State Bluegrass, a fine local band including such talented musicians as Rose and Dave Haney. Tickets are $11 and are available from Sandy's Music in Cambridge as well as through Ticketron, Teletron, Concertcharge, and all Strawberries outlets. Lynnfield with which he laid about him till one arm after the other was broken.

"The dead were all buried in one grave ..." Such is the brief story of the company known as The Flower of Essex, the men belonging to this part of the State. How many went from here we know not, but we do know Stephen Wellman, of what is now Lynnfield, was killed with the others.

Located so close to Salem Village, it would be extremely unlikely that the region should escape any involvement in the witchcraft controversy of 1692 and in fact, it did not.

Wellman: "A tradition of witchcraft still lingers as a souvenir ... of 1692. It is said that Mrs. Samuel Hart, of the east part of town, whose name was Sarah Endicott ... was seized as a witch and lodged in Salem jail.

"One morning her daughter arose and said, 'I am going to see mother to-day, and bring her home with me.' Her friends said sadly, 'Oh, no!' She went to Salem and word had arrived from England that there should be no more executions, and her mother came home with her."

Another, more famous local victim of the witchcraft hysteria was not so fortunate.

"The precinct had the year before," Wellman wrote, "lost by death one of its prominent men ... Giles Corey, who lived in West Peabody, near the Lynnfield line, and whose landed estate was about a couple of miles from what is now the centre of Lynnfield, had been pressed to death."

The following year, Lynn End sent its proportion of men to take part in the events which launched the Revolution. One in particular deserves mention for his role.

From Wellman's "History of Lynnfield:"

"Among those who were wounded on the famous 19th of April was Timothy Munroe of Lynnfield ... He was standing behind a house with Daniel Townsend and firing at the British troops as they were coming down the road ...

"Townsend had just fired and exclaimed, 'There's another redcoat down,' when Munroe, looking around, saw to his astonishment that they were completely hemmed in by the flank guard of the British army, who were coming down the fields behind them.

"They immediately ran into the house and sought for the cellar, but no cellar was there. They looked for a closet, but there was none. All this time ... the balls were pouring through the back windows ... Townsend leaped through the end window, carrying the sash and all with him, and instantly fell dead.

"Munroe followed and ran for his life. He passed for a long distance between both parties, many of whom discharged their guns at him. As he passed the last soldier who stopped to fire he heard the redcoat exclaim, 'Damn the Yankee, he is bullet proof, let him go.'"

"Mr. Munroe had one ball through his leg and 32 bullet-holes through his clothes and hat. Even the metal buttons of his waistcoat were shot off. He kept his clothes till he was tired of showing them, and died in 1808, aged 72 years."

Wellman notes further that Munroe, while pursuing the retreating British, came on a wounded soldier of the king who begged him to dress his rapidly bleeding wound. Munroe complied, and received for his kindness a silver buckle from the soldier.

It is impossible to present the history of any New England community without touching on its theology. The 1714 meeting house — still standing on the town common, was for more than 115 years the only place for government and worship in Lynnfield.

Wellman: "The church was at its foundation strictly Orthodox ... (but by the early 19th century) a part of the society remained Orthodox, and a part became Unitarians; these offered the Orthodox party joint occupancy of the church, also to have all the evangelical preaching they could pay for."

But the "new" Unitarian theology, by 1832, had become unacceptable to 18 persons, 12 of them church members, who formed their own Orthodox Evangelical Society, and built a new church across the street.

Before many years had passed, according to Marcia Wiswall, the remaining members of the Unitarian
